POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

The Defendant herein, JAN ROUVEN FUECHTENER (hereinafter “Jan”) was detained pending trial in the instant case. He is currently housed at the Henderson Detention Center.

When his lawyers visit him, they have one of two options. They can do a phone visit with a video screen from the lobby or they can do a contact visit. The contact visit is conducted in a closed room with a glass partition between the parties. There are two locked doors and a drawer (similar to drawer at a banking drive through) that allows the parties to pass documents back and forth. The parties must converse using a telephone as the glass partition muffles the conversation making it difficult to hear without the phone. Further, when both lawyers visit him, both attorneys cannot have a joint conversation with Jan as there is only one phone on each side of the glass.

Based upon this, counsel prays for an order allowing for visits to made in an open air room at the Henderson Detention Center. There is precedent for this, but the staff at the facility will only allow for this remedy with the order.
